Study Multilingualism in Konstanz

Multilingual is someone who ‘[…]uses more than one language regularly and is able to converse in all of one’s languages’ (Rosemarie Tracy, University of Mannheim)

The increase in globalization and migration have led to an increase in the diversity of our societies. This diversity raises the importance of multilingualism in research and education. The M.A. in Multilingualism in Konstanz is an innovative 2-year programme that incorporates cutting edge training in linguistics and multilingualism across the lifespan together with training in research design, research methods and statistics.

The courses address two core domains of multilingualism:

Multilingualism and the individual
- Early childhood multilingualism
- Second language acquisition in children and adults
- Third language acquisition
- Acquisition of heritage languages

Aspects of multilingualism in society
- Multilingualism in the classroom
- Multilingualism and migration
- Language contact and language change
- Language attrition

The programme offers

- Teaching by world-leading experts in linguistics and multilingualism
- An experimental focus with access to research laboratories (e.g., reaction time, eye-tracking, EEG, and baby-speech-lab)
- Training in research methods and statistics
- Opportunities to conduct your own research
- Opportunities to experience an additional academic environment during the semester abroad or to develop professional skills through an internship
- An interdisciplinary environment through the Centre for Multilingualism at the University of Konstanz
- An option to take courses from sociology, psychology and other related disciplines
- Language of instruction: English

Degree structure

The M.A. Multilingualism is a 2-year programme (4 semesters), with a workload of 120 ECTS-points.

You will spend the first two semesters in Konstanz, focussing on courses in linguistics, multilingualism, research methods and statistics. In the third semester, you can choose between a stay abroad, studying multilingualism at one of our partner institutions or undertaking an internship with a company / institution / research group relevant to the degree. In the fourth semester you will write your Master thesis and take an oral exam.
